

Southeastern Massachusetts Bioreserve - Recreation & Public Access

The 13,600-acre Southeastern Massachusetts Bioreserve combines the Freetown State Forest, Copicut Wildlife Management Area, TTOR's Copicut Woods, and eastern parts of the city's watershed lands, including the Copicut Reservoir. The Bioreserve is managed in a cooperative and consistent manner that preserves the functionality of a large-scale ecosystem and promotes biodiversity, conservation, water supply protection, sustainable forest management, and scientific, educational, and recreational opportunities. For further information on public access to Bioreserve lands, please contact the appropriate landowner as depicted on the map.
